ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

When transmitting voice data, correction codes each representing data of one data packet are added to the transmitted data from the outset. Thus, it is made possible to restore one data packet lost for the first time, and when and only when two successive data packets are discarded, one packet data is lost. In this way, the data discarding endurance is improved.